On May 28th, 2013, I wanted to have a conversation with Pradeep, but the timing wasn’t right I was hurt on something. Surprisingly, the next day, he himself asked about my well-being. I was shared the details of my accident without getting emotional with a guy first time, but I didn’t mention the current state of my health issues.

After listening to everything, Pradeep slowly changed the subject, and we continued our conversation through text messages.

It made me feel liberated and relieved. I prayed to God to keep Prici by my side for the rest of my life, as I felt that these two individuals could abandon me at any time (pradee and Sai).

On June 26th, 2013, I started to feel that my fears were gradually becoming a reality, causing me a great deal of anxiety. I wanted to discuss it with Prici, but I didn't get the chance. It seemed like she wasn't interested in hearing what I had to say. I couldn't share my concerns even with my parents. The feeling of anxiety was resurfacing, and I ended up being admitted to the hospital due to bedsores, adding to my distress.
